

Submarines and Fish

Submarines can dive and surface at will. How is this accomplished?

Fish can do a similar thing. One way is to use their tail fins to force themselves up and down, but they use other methods, so that they can use their energy moving forward, not just holding themselves down or up.

Please write up what you find out in a word document. Are there similarities? Are there differences?